Welcome to The Feathers Tea Room

The Feathers was built in 1619 on the foundations of an earlier building as a home for Rees Jones, a successful lawyer from Pembrokeshire.

The Feathers name comes from the plumes of Ostrich feathers carved into the timber façade of the building which can still be seen on the street gables.

Feathers were fashionable at the time, probably because of the celebrations when the future Charles I became the Prince of Wales three years earlier.

In 1670, Rees Jones' grandson turned the family home into an inn, The Feathers has been welcoming guests ever since and expanding over the years, eventually becoming an hotel in the 1860's.

Also in 1619, Ludlow was a prosperous town, home to the Council of the Marches which met at Ludlow Castle, and considered to be the capital of Wales.

Tea was a rare luxury only available in the court of James I, having been brought to England by the East India Company in 1610.

Inigo Jones began building The Banqueting House at Whitehall, London.

Cyrano de Bergerac, French soldier and poet, was born 6th March.

Richard Burbage, English Actor and Theatre Proprietor, died 13th March.

England and The Netherlands signed a trade treaty for the Indies.

38 Colonists from Berkeley, England disembarked in Virginia and gave thanks to God, which is considered the first Thanksgiving in America. One year later, the Pilgrim Fathers were to leave England for America on-board the Mayflower.
