Our History

The Feathers Hotel dates back to 1619 and was completed that year by Rees Jones, a practicing attorney from Pembrokeshire who had come to Ludlow to pursue his profession at the "Council of the Marches".

Listed as a Grade 1 building on 15th April 1965, the hotel is one of approximately 500 listed buildings in Ludlow, but is certainly one of its best known. Converted to an inn in 1670, the imposing half-timbered Feathers Hotel is noted for its Jacobean furnishings and its timber façade which features motifs of the Prince of Wales' feathers, from where the name derives.
